FAMARA ARMCHAIR

The Famara armchair was a Polynesian throne (the armchair called "Pomaré") before it gained worldwide notoriety at the film's release, hence its imposing, spectacular and radically exotic side! It was also, for the record, included in many other films.. Opulence and refinement of rattan lace weaves, amplitudes of volumes, and base enlarged in diameter for improved stability. The model presented here is made with a cross pattern, one of the most popular because it can be made with chopsticks from Buri, a plant from Southeast Asia, from which we get cheap veins.

Height: 154. Width: 110. Length 70. Sitting at: 42cm. Weight 7kg.

Natural rattan structure, weaving in cord and rattan splint.

Satin water-based varnish.
